

Pastor Amanda Stein,
Sun Prairie United Methodist:

Basic human dignity allows each person, male/female, no matter his/her background, demographic, or location the ability to work a day's labor and to be paid fairly to provide for necessities – housing, good health, and foundational education --for the worker and his/her own family. We are now living in an age in the United States where this is no longer true. Rather citizens are becoming more and more indebted due to the expenses of health care, education, and cost of living. It is time to raise the “minimum wage” to a true “living wage.”
